Prosperity of Sheep Raising.

Wool growing has come back as one of the best industries of farming. The changes in the law made by the present congress will cause the American woolen goods market to be supplied as far as practicable from American flocks. The very opening of the Harrison administration transformed the future of this great interest. Wool, in fact, commenced looking up from the time that a Republican triumph was foreboded in the last presidential election. Why? Every wool grower knows. Cleveland used every means in his power to bring about free wool and discourage the manufacture of goods from the American wool product. His treasury and customs regulations favored low classifications and the admission of foreign goods and foreign wool to glut our markets. The manufacturers of woolen goods were dismayed. They abandoned all plans for improvements and enlargements and commenced to draw in their business. Many farmers, too, abandoned their flocks and sacrificed them on a glutted mutton market.

Now all this is changed. Those who own sheep are hanging on to them, building up their flocks again and mutton is hard to get. In spite of two warm winters, which checked the season's consumption of woolen goods, and in spite of the recent large importations hurried in to forestall the McKinley bill, wool has again become one of the most lucrative products of the farm. It will remain so, for about half the wools of Christendom are used in the United States, so large is the population in our cooler latitudes and so liberal their individual purchases as compared with most other peoples. At present we use 600,000,000 pounds of wool yearly, and grow only 240,000,000 pounds. It will be a generation at least before the latter figures overtake the former, not to mention the vast strides of our population doubling every thirty years. In less than a year the relations of supply and demand will have settled down to their normal condition.

With a favored market, wool growing again takes its place as a profitable branch of agriculture and one of the surest dependences of the farm. It shows how intimate is the relation between the tariff and the permanent prosperity of the farmer. The wool growers of one Michigan county realized nearly a quarter of a million dollars from this year's clip. That means a large available supply of cash, and greater prosperity. As a rule the wool growers embrace many of the most far-sighted and brainiest men in the farming business, and they know that it is to the interest of agriculture to support the tariff system which keeps the benefits of our own markets at home.—Donaghy's Republican.

Future of Wheat Raising.

Oliver Dalrymple, of Dakota, who is probably the foremost (though perhaps not the largest) grain grower in the United States, or in the world, has recently thrown light on the future of this industry. He directs public attention to the fact that the area in wheat in this country has scarcely changed in ten years, being about 38,000,000 acres; while in the same period the population has been added to nearly 14,500,000. Another ten years will see an augmentation of between 18,000,000 and 19,000,000. The average export of wheat has been declining, through the necessary operation of the domestic demand. Before another census, as Mr. Dalrymple shows, the home supply will have ceased to be sufficient and the United States will become an importer of wheat. If the wheat crop is kept to the limits of the present year, these imports will set in before five years pass away, for we have not over 40,000,000 bushels to spare now.

It requires no argument to show what effect this will have on the price of wheat in America. Even a season of a large diminution of our exports helps the market. The wisdom, the foresight, of maintaining a tariff on wheat, as is done by the new law of congress, is abundantly shown. Such a law is not merely for a season or two. It will improve the condition of agriculture by securing to our principal crop a favored market, a market to which India and Russia and Australia will not be admitted. The future is manifestly one in which our farming interests will not be subjected to the hard conditions of the general market. No great interest prospers or suffers without affecting the rest. Nobody desires to see prices in the farming industry so low as to be unremunerative, but on the contrary, every other branch of production knows that the general prosperity will be most healthy when the farmers are doing well. Mr. Dalrymple urges that American farmers still continue to hold their wheat area in check and to diversify their products. Thus will they hasten relief by their proper adjustment to the home consumption of wheat, which is by far the greatest grain market of the world.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life.

It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time; she weighed less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read of Dr. King's New Discovery, and got a sample bottle; it helped her more, bought another and grew better fast, continued its use and is now strong, healthy, rosy, plump, weighing 140 pounds. For fuller particulars send stamp to W. H. Cole, druggist, Fort Smith. Trial bottles of this wonderful discovery free at Dr. J. D. Hamilton's drug store.

A couple of China tea steamers recently raced from Hyogo to New York. One started June 10th and the other June 11th. The former maintained her lead in coming in first in fifty-four days from Japan to New York.

Do you have "Logomachy," with everyone who calls at your office or in your homes; "don't you know why?" Its your stomach; your need a Spring medicine and tonic, and Loos's Extract of Red Clover is just what you want; try it and be convinced. For sale by J. D. Hamilton.

Resolved, That the altar of this Post, in commemoration of our deceased comrade, be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days.

MONTANA, OREGON AND WASHINGTON.

The Northern Pacific Railroad, passing through Minnesota, Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington was the first line to bring the region occupied by these states into communication with the east. Its main line and branches penetrate all sections of these states, reaching nine-tenths of the chief cities. It is the shortest line to Helena and Butte, Mont., Spokane Falls, Tacoma and Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Ore., and the only line running through train service from the east through the states of Montana and Washington. Pullman Sleepers and Tourist Sleeping Cars via Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Northern Pacific, from Chicago through to the Pacific Coast without change. This is the Dining Car and Yellowstone Park route.

The latest travel on the Northern Pacific line necessitated the inauguration in June 1890, of a second through train to the Pacific Coast, thus enabling this road to offer the public the advantage of two through trains daily to Montana and points in the Pacific Northwest, carrying complete service of sleeping, dining, and regular day coaches. The train leaving St. Paul in the morning runs via the recently completed Air Line of the Northern Pacific through Butte, Mont., making this the shortest line to the latter point by 120 miles.

Colonists for Washington, Oregon and British Columbia points should take no other route than the Northern Pacific, as by this line only can all portions of the state of Washington be seen. Stopovers are also made at the beautiful city of Spokane Falls and all points west, enabling settlers to inspect the country without extra expense.
